

Professional Ethics and the Military

Philosophy 6600

Hawaii Pacific University

Spring 2010 Hawaii Loa Campus, AC 208 , Thursdays 18:00-20:55

Instructor: James (Andy) Stroble, Ph.D. E-mail: stroble@hawaii.edu

Course Web Page: <<http://www.aloha.net/~stroble>>

Catalog Description:

This course is concerned with the ethics of warfare and professional conduct. Attention will be paid to ethical theory, the tradition of military virtues, and the moral imperatives that distinguish the profession of arms. Topics may include legal and illegal orders, just war, and the treatment of noncombatants. Pre-requisites: Graduate standing.

More specific description:

We will have several things to consider in this course. Normally professional ethics can assume the legitimacy of its profession from the bare fact that it exists. Given that, the profession itself is able to specify its own ethical standards on the basis of that public trust. The case is different with the military, at least in the present, because there is no consensus on the legitimacy of warfare itself, so professional military ethics requires examination of the ethics of war before it can move ahead to self-definition. Therefore in this seminar we will begin with a consideration of ethics in general, and then of the definition of war and the grounding of ethics of war, and return in the end to the ethics of the military profession.

Objectives:

Clarification of the concept and justification of war
Familiarity with traditional conventions limiting war
Acquaintance with modern international law of armed conflict
Understanding of ethical and political theories concerned with military action
Develop abilities for rational and critical thought on issues of war and peace

Evaluation:

Students will write a 20 page research paper on a topic selected in consultation with the instructor. This paper must be philosophical in nature, dealing with an ethical issue, and must conform to academic standards for content, style, and mechanics. Submission of rough drafts strongly encouraged. (70%) A paper proposal, subject to instructor approval, is to be submitted on date listed below. In addition, each student will give a presentation on their paper topic, preferably (though not required) during a session which deals with the same or related topics. (20%) And: Attendance:

Attendance is good. Failure to attend seminars will have a negative impact on final grades. Participation in seminar discussions is required and expected. (10%)

Texts:

Walzer, Michael, Just and Unjust Wars: A Moral Argument with Historical Illustrations

Gray, J. Glenn, The Warriors: Reflections on Men in Battle.

Toner, James H., True Faith and Allegiance: The Burden of Military Ethics

Internet Access (WWW) required for additional readings. <<http://www.aloha.net/~stroble>>

Schedule: subject to revision; readings especially!

Always check the main Web Page for readings and suggested reading.

Day One January 28: Introductions

Professional Ethics

Day Two February 4

Ethical Theory

Day Three February 11

The Concept of War

--Paper topic due.

Day Four February 18

Just War

Day Five February 25

International Law

Day Six March 4

Non-combatant Immunity

March 11, NO CLASS! Instructor at conference.

Day Seven March 18

Mercenaries: the War Machine

*SPRING BREAK!!!! March 22-26****

Day Eight April 1

Loyalty

Day Nine April 8

Deception

Day Ten April 15

Weapons

Day Eleven April 22

Déformation professionnelle: Training

Day Twelve April 29

Bloody Hands

Day Thirteen: May 6

The Paradox of Power

Day Fourteen: May 13

Non-Violent Resistance

--Papers due!